Better Prisons, Better Men

By Elva Dorr

In my first article on Prison Reform, I gave some glowing reports and asked what we were going to do about it. I spoke of criminals as being sick and diseased men. Sick people are entitled to the right kind of care—the mentally sick need special treatment. The physically sick need special treatment. Nature and right living has brought many a person back to normalcy. Criminals, especially, should have outdoor life and work.

How unfortunate that the United States should turn a deaf ear to the ideas of one Dr. Fred Leonard, warden of the Ohio State Reformatory. Because this man with a vision was considered radical in his proposed treatment of prisoners, we would have none of his ideas and put them into effect. So he went to Canada and there he accepted his ideas with the result following: Quoted:

No Walls, No Guns, Guelph, Ont.

"Canada has a prison where there are no guns, walls, politics, or escapes. It is the most radical of American warden, who was regarded as fanatical in his ideas. How it is his plan in the United States, operated is told in the following article:

"The radically idealistic prison system of Ontario, which has never known a mutiny or riot in the twenty-five years of its history, is the result of the plan of one man, Dr. Fred Leonard, warden of the Ohio State Reformatory, Mansfield, known as the 'crusading warden'."

"His vision of the prison as a protection for the public and an agent for the reclamation of the individual has become a reality in this province. In 1903, Dr. Leonard presented his gospel of 'No Guns and No Walls'. Inconspicuous in a back seat was W. J. Hanna, then provincial secretary, in charge of public institutions."

"The Ontario Reformatory at Guelph, and the Reformatory at Kingston, Ontario, are the fruit of this vision. Dr. Leonard presented his gospel of 'No Guns and No Walls'. Inconspicuous in a back seat was W. J. Hanna, then provincial secretary, in charge of public institutions."

"The Ontario Reformatory at Guelph, and the Reformatory at Kingston, Ontario, are the fruit of this vision. Dr. Leonard presented his gospel of 'No Guns and No Walls'. Inconspicuous in a back seat was W. J. Hanna, then provincial secretary, in charge of public institutions."

"Even when a man has lost his privileges we never cut him off from seeing his own people when they come to visit him. We do everything possible to hold the man and his home together, for we know that the man whose home is broken up while he is here is likely to be a dangerous man when he leaves. Then, too, in keeping the man busy, we help him to keep in contact with the world. It is still his world. We do not want him to find it strange when he can again re-enter. He must not come to think of himself as a creature forever apart from his fellow-men. When the day comes that we can have humane prisons, there will be no more bloody riots and mutinies, for the men and women will accept their punishment and will cooperate with their helpers and teachers to once more become acceptable citizens in the state of society."

This soothing, safe ointment that frequently relieves in one application—this is the only one that has been used every hour for 50 years. All druggists.

MUSTEROLE

Relief from Gas Stomach Pains Dizziness

The doctors tell us that 90 per cent of all ailments is due to stomach and bowel troubles. You can't be well if your digestion is bad; you are likely to get everything wrong if you eat and digest it properly.

Tanlac has a wonderful record as a relief from digestive troubles, even those of years standing.

Local people, many of whom you know, are highly eulogizing Tanlac. For example, Mrs. Ellen White says: "For years I suffered from indigestion. I got no relief from anything until I took Tanlac. After my fourth bottle I feel like a new person and have a fine appetite."

If you suffer from gas, pains in the stomach or bowels, dizziness, nausea, constipation, or torpid liver, if you have no appetite, can't sleep and are nervous and all run down, you need Tanlac. It is good, pure medicine, made of roots, herbs and barks. Get a bottle from your druggist today. Money back if it doesn't help you. Acrost no substitute.

Marketing Products

Excerpts from Address of the Secretary of Agriculture, Arthur M. Hyde Delivered at Bangor, Maine

There is no industry in America which is more highly competitive than agriculture. Agriculture competes not only with the living standards and production costs in our own country, and with living standards of other sections of our country.

For example, Maine potatoes must compete for a market with all other potatoes grown in the country, and also with wheat, rye, oats and other crops which may acceptably be substituted in the nation's diet. On occasion, too, they must compete with imported potatoes. Growers are in competition not alone with other apples, but with oranges, bananas and other possible substitutes.

There is no such thing as a localized agriculture. Different sections of the country have different agricultural problems, but farming is not a localized industry. It exists in every State. It is scattered entirely across the country and from the lakes to the gulf. It is divided into six million separate farms or production units, each one in competition with the other, both in production and marketing. How hopelessly futile it is to attempt to separate the agriculture of any state or section from the rest of the country is a fact which will not be denied by the whole of it.

There seems to exist a feeling among farmers of the New England States that the Agricultural Marketing Act of 1929 is a Federal Farm Board and has been established to aid agriculture of the Mississippi Valley, but do not concern New England. The Agricultural Marketing Act, however, refers only to agriculture of the United States and the Federal Farm Board includes all thinking, not part, but all the agriculture of this country.

The Board cannot do otherwise. Let it be the function of the Board to help the farmer to improve the marketing of his products. The very first obstacle they would encounter would be the fact that Maine potatoes are sold to the grocers, and grocers to the Southwest and the Southeast were supplying potatoes to the market. The Farm Board would be forced to realize that although the grocers and the potatoes may be localized, the marketing of potatoes is national, and that nothing could be done unless the program included the potato growers of all States. The one thing holds good for all farm commodities.

Maine's chief agricultural crop, potatoes, is inseparably linked with the national potato situation. The income from the crop constitutes a third to a half of the total income from all crops in Maine. The amount of that income is determined largely by the national situation. In 1929, Maine growers produced 27,000,000 bushels of potatoes and received only 42 cents a bushel or $11,540,000, but in 1925, you produced 24,500,000 bushels and sold them for $1.56 a bushel or $38,210,000. The extent to which this extreme variation in the price of Maine potatoes is the result of national conditions may be judged from the fact that about $1.10 of this range of $1.14 in Maine prices is due to the size of the national crop and only about 44 cents or less than 25 per cent. of that fluctuation is attributable to the local situation in Maine. The price in 1924 was 43 cents; in 1925, $1.08; in 1926, $1.33; in 1927, 85 cents; in 1928, 45 cents. This year Maine has been receiving much higher prices than in 1928, in spite of a record Maine crop, but as a result of a shortage in other areas. Thus Maine potato growers alternate between famine and famine not alone because of the size of the Maine crop, but more because of the crop of other states.

Obviously anything done to regulate the production and stabilize the markets for agriculture must also be beneficial to Maine. The first of the Department of Agriculture show that production of potatoes in the Northeastern States costs from 58 to 74 cents per bushel. The production costs of the North Central States range from 47 to 56 cents. It would seem that, since the Northeastern States have higher production costs to protect, the stabilization program of the Federal Farm Board offers them very substantial benefit.

Wisconsin dairy products and Idaho potatoes and northwestern apples are not new crops. They were not created by the Federal Farm Board. That competition has long existed and it has at times been very keen. New England commodities, the object of the Farm Board is to so organize the various groups of producers that they may regulate the production of commodities to the potential demand and to stabilize their marketing. Is this not much better than unrestrained competition of one section against another.

The Farm Board in January appointed a group of seven potato growers representing Virginia, Colorado, Michigan, Florida, South Carolina and Maine. Your state was represented by W. R. Thompson of Caribou. This group recommended:

"A national-wide farmer-owned and controlled co-operative marketing system founded basically on community local groups into district or regional organizations, and, through them, into a national system, must be developed. The present only marketing agency that has no interests that antagonistic to either the producers' or consumers' needs.

"A system of production credit under the proper control and management of farmers' co-operatives and for the farmers' benefit should replace the present credit extended by the speculative potato interests. It is the opinion of the co-operatives represented that this is an essential means to secure and maintain co-operative membership.

"That there is no help for the farmers through the present uncoordinated system of production and distribution; that the farmers should realize that they must help themselves through the organization now made possible for them under the Agricultural Marketing Act; that production can be adjusted to a profitable level only through organization; that effective merchandizing can be carried out only through national-wide co-operative marketing."

These recommendations are now being worked out by the Farm Board. A meeting was held at Boston in February, which was attended by a representative of the Board, the presidents, deans, and others from the Agricultural Colleges of New England. Your own Governor Gardiner interested himself to attend. As a result of that meeting, a study is now being made of New England agriculture with a view to ascertaining the best type of organization to fit the needs of New England farmers. Upon the basis of that study, we confidently expect, through the Farm Board, to achieve for New England agriculture the same beneficial results as are planned for the agriculture of any other section of the United States.

As the pullets in the poultry flock begin to lay eggs they need fairly large amounts of calcium for the formation of eggshells. This is probably best supplied in the form of oyster shells or limestone.

Oxford Pomona Grange

Large Meeting at Welchville

Oxford Pomona Grange met April 1, with Oxford Grange, at Welchville. During the forenoon the usual business was transacted with several pro tem officers. Overseer, Chesley Saunders; Steward, E. L. Cummings; Treasurer, L. E. McIntire; Flora, Mrs. McIntire; Ceres, Mrs. Saunders.

Since the last meeting the death of the chaplain, O. S. Hamlin, has occurred. A memorial service was held. The members stood at attention while the chaplain read, F. I. Cummings, offered prayer; remarks were made by Mr. McIntire. The degree was conferred upon Charlotte Longley and Marie Holt of Oliverway, Rita Linnell of Otisfield and Oliver Sweet of Paris.

Because of the extra large attendance, it was necessary to make two settings at the dinner table, the meal being prepared and served by the ladies of Oxford Grange.

The attendance: Hebron Grange, 1; this was Uncle Charles George, 95 years of age, who took an active part in the conferring of the degree.

Paris Grange 35, Norway 30, Oxford 22, South Waterford 6, Franklin 15, West Bethel 5, Bear River 6, West Paris 10, Frederick Robert 4, Pleasant Pond 4. Visitors numbered more than 20 from various granges in the State.

At the beginning of the afternoon meeting a short play was put on by Mrs. Belle Strawford of Oxford; she impersonated St. Perkins for an encore and did a good job.

Lewis Woodworth, master of Paris Grange, gave a vocal solo and an encore. The features of the program were selections by the orchestra of the Federated Church of Oxford. The leader is Harry Deane. All are young people, and the orchestra is composed of the corner, Robert Deane; saxophone, Lawrence Lapham; trombone, Lorraine Holden; violins, Shirley Quinn, Eleanor Andrews, Ruth Stead, Gertrude Stead, Norman Holden; piano, Gertrude Stead.

A vocal solo was given by Mrs. Mabel Thurlow of Oxford. Oscar Chandler of West Sumner, in spite of his 82 years, gave some good stories. The subject of the remarks of W. W. Chandler was "Who is to blame?" The subject matter related to grading and standardizing farm crops to sell in city markets. For example, he had the eggs and labels authorized by the last Legislature which people may use to produce and sell eggs, potatoes, apples, etc. These standards and grades are not compulsory, but if they are used, the user must guarantee that what's in the package agrees with what's on the label.

He showed how those farmers using them are satisfied and if others don't want to use them that's their affair, and if the man who puts up the better stuff, grades it and packs it well, and gets a good price, then "who's to blame?"

One of the questions he asked was, does not the grower have something of a moral obligation to the consumer that the article he produces is of good quality whether he guarantees it or not? Is not the city woman, with a large family and a small budget, entitled when she buys potatoes to get potatoes that are of good quality, because she and all housewives can least afford to throw away anything?

At the request of the lecturer the speaker went over the matter of farm relief as it was presented by Commissioner Wilson at Orono and Secretary Hyde at Bangor, last week.

Commenting on what the speaker had said about conferring the degree of outstanding farmer on L. E. McIntire, the lecturer called upon Mr. McIntire who said that whatever of honor had come to him because of good farm practices is shared with the people of this Pomona who had helped him. It was an honor to Oxford County, and was a credit to what had been done rather than who did it.

Mr. Woodworth gave another song and the ladies of Oxford Grange gave several numbers of small plays and pantomimes.

The lecturer, Austin P. Stearns, Jr., asked the members to think over the matter of the degree of outstanding farmer, to give more time to the program and perhaps action will be taken at a later date. The next meeting will be at West Bethel, on Tuesday in May. At this meeting a representative of the NEMFA of Boston will be the speaker.

THE AROMA OF THE SOIL

"Smells are surer than sounds or sights to make your heartstrings crack," wrote Kipling, and those who have already gotten the first gust of Spring air as it flowed over the lap of Mother Earth, realize how truly he spoke.

There is something about the aroma of the soil that gets under the skin of even the city born. The turning of a few spadefuls of earth has made gardens of those who never before dreamed of a garden.

And what enthusiastic gardeners they become. To them the growth of a tiny seedling is a triumph. Familiarity has not bred the contempt that it oft times breeds in the man who has toiled in the garden all his life.

They seek out the bits of soil around their houses, learn to cultivate it, have in the fresh vegetables they produce with so little effort, and almost instantaneously have joined that immense army of town and city gardeners, who each year purchase their seeds and seek to better their achievements of years that have gone.

Try gardening your own tiny plot of ground. Try it once and you, too, will be an incurable gardener. There is something about the aroma of the soil that seeps into one's very fibre.

Comments Gathered and Stolen

By Dr. Mitchell of Alton, N. H., Professor at and of Many Things

You can't get a squirrel on the ground—he'll climb.

The only way you can grieve a be-nighted man is to refuse to hear his raps on your door.

Being popular is a business of itself.

An "is" or "is to be" is better than a "has been."

On the great clock of time there is but one word—now.

The following marginalia are copied from the books of John Adams, second President of the United States; and were found in his handwriting, some of them being written after he had arrived at a great age. Their source, logical soundness and brevity should make them of great interest to those given to serious thought.

"God has established no equality among men in practice or theory, but a moral equality. The giant has a natural right to his stature of eight feet and his strength and to 200 pounds; and the dwarf to his three feet, and his strength equal to 50 pounds."

Isaiah, XIX, 14: The Lord has mingled a pestilence in the midst of Egypt, etc.

"A little like Voltaire, but his canyons were universal—the Prophet's are particular. There are the prophecies of common sense as well as of divine wisdom. The ruin of a divided people is a thing of course: One Deity, the sublime, profoundest of all philosophy, all religion, all policy, all manners! What circumstance in antiquity is not attended with some absurdity?"

"Equality is one of those equivocal words which the philosophers of the eighteenth century has made fraudulent. The word, as it is used, is a swindle. In the last twenty-five years it has cheated millions out of their lives, and tens of millions out of their property."

The eagle is a noble bird, but he is so exclusive that he leads a lonely life. The crow is more common, more sociable, and gets more fun out of life. I think. The other day one laughed at me. He was in the tree top and I stopped to look. I'm sure he laughed at "ha, ha," as he flew away.

Ability. I have to laugh when I hear anyone say, "I will be a good rear-end—He has ability." The captain of the Titanic had undoubtedly ability, but he lacked judgement and his ship went down.

Tom is now a mighty hunter. Last week he was out in the field gathering clover for his rabbit, saw a small animal some distance off, picked up a stone and approaching the animal in the rear smote him on the head. It was a porcupine; weighed 9 pounds. He received a bounty of 50 cents from the Selectmen, plucked out 150 quills, buried the remains and considers the incident closed.

Don says he will buy an old Ford "for about relief to turn it out." "Then," says he, "when I get a good car I'll know just what to do." These youngsters are keen.

A whole people never can be corrupted, but they may be often mistaken, and it is in such a case only that they appear to seek their own advantage. Rousseau. "May not a majority be corrupt?"

How's your tractor? Our's is busted. It's a great big machine. Have you again on again, gone again? Say all you will, the old oxtend had no flat tires or busted gears.

Have been reading Don Seitz's "Joseph Pulitzer. His Life and Letters." It's a great book; well arranged and of special interest to me. I was a resident of New Orleans during the period of the transformation of the World and the book recalls many incidents, so can't hurry the reading.

Have planted the hollyhock seeds and hope to get some thrifty plants. If they are pure strain and produce the black blooms that the parent stock grew in such profusion I will be well pleased.

233 millions dollars worth of property was up in smoke during 1924-5, in the United States. From what the National Board of Fire Underwriters states to be "strictly preventable causes." 500 other millions destroyed by rats. Somebody has to work over to make good such losses or go without something that they might have had, which is worse.

Read that an old man said hard work had prolonged his life. Don't believe it. Hard work never prolonged anybody's life. Fishing, loafing, whittling, taking life easy—such might do the trick if the man's grandfather was of the right strain.

A man here is an active prohibitionist. I asked him: Are you interested in the health of the community? Have you ever attempted to instruct people about their health? He replied that he had thought about it. I then asked him: "Do you know that there has been an increase in crimes against women in the United States since prohibition was enacted and seductions of young girls under the Eighteenth Amendment; that there are more 'missing' girls and more girls who have contracted the drinking habit under prohibition than when saloons were permitted?" He answered: "I don't know, but I imagine that conditions are worse now than ever before."

Thad Jones said: "Did you ever drink beer or wine?" And he said: "No, I never liked it, and it cost too much." "So," said I, "to sum up, your interest in prohibition is very similar to that of the Puritans, who prohibited young men from kissing their wives. You enjoy clamping the brakes on the habits of other people, preventing them from doing whatever you don't want to do, forcing them to do as you say, not because you are interested in their happiness and welfare, but because you wish to be Boss over others."

I can readily see that Don Seitz has a wide and comprehensive knowledge of men and events, and that he has a command of the English language. He is, I imagine, of a mind that dwells on matters historical, sober and statistical, rather than in those that require flights of imagination into the poetical and ethical.

I am not a fisherman. Never could be. I do not like to inflict physical pain or to disturb the life of a creature. To be close to them, to observe and photograph them, is a delight. I could catch a fish and eat it, if some person would let me know how to do it, then it would be because I was hungry.

But I would enjoy being with fishermen, if there were not too many. The surroundings would appeal to me. I do not like crowds, nor do I enjoy promiscuous associations. The motives that actuate the average human, the diversions that they seek, the impulses that move them, are often disgusting to me. This is just because I was assembled in a way that differs from the average. I have often wished it were otherwise.

A DEMOCRATIC INDUSTRY

In other parts of the world, the United States is looked up to as the land of progress, prosperity and the highest standard of living and living conditions.

Electrical development, brought about by American initiative and enterprise, is responsible for our unrivaled home conveniences, our rapid output per factory worker with resulting high wages and our modern factories with their healthful atmosphere.

American electrical development has been demonstrated to be too small or too large to receive the same reasonably priced service.

The universal distribution of electricity in the United States has been the result of the desire of private companies to furnish the masses with every electrical convenience at low cost instead of selling to a privileged few at high cost.

LEAVE PRIVATE BUSINESS PRIVATE

"If it is desirable to protect the people in their freedom and independence, if it is desirable to avoid the blighting effect of monopoly, supported by the money of the taxpayer, if it is desirable to prevent the existence of a privileged class, if it is desirable to shield public officials from the influence of interested selfishness, if it is desirable to keep the Government unencumbered and clean, with an eye single to the public service, we shall leave the conduct of our private business with the individual, where it belongs, and not undertake to unload it on the Government."—Former President Calvin Coolidge.

BATES—WEST PARIS

D. of U. V. Meeting—Mrs. Delilah Morgan Dead—Cafeteria Supper Held.

Rev. Eleanor B. Forbes gave a very interesting temperance address last Sunday evening in the United Parish church. The program followed: The W. C. T. U. Her talk was based on the influence of the life of Frances E. Willard, the founder of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union. Of her optimism, fearlessness and far sightedness for the benefit and uplift of humanity. The W. C. T. U. has grown to be the largest, worldwide woman's organization, revered by all the "drys" and greatly feared by the "wets". She declared when a girl that she would vote when she was of age if she were a man and didn't see why women shouldn't be allowed to vote. Later in her public work she advocated equal suffrage. Rev. G. C. Smith offered prayer and a chorus choir led the congregational singing.

LOYALTY TO HOME

Nothing will make a man fight quicker than to tell him that he is not loyal to his country, or that his country is not worthy of his loyalty.

What is true of one's country should be equally true of the place we call home. It is hard to imagine anything more inconsistent than a man or woman living in a community in which they do not prove their undivided loyalty by their daily practices.

Most everyone can think of a town or city that has grown and developed into a prosperous community because every inhabitant pulled together and worked together for its upbuilding.

Every such place is a lesson that each one may appropriate and think over as an example that might well be emulated. The lesson of pulling together can always be studied to the benefit of the individual as well as a collection of individuals making up a community. When divided, we weaken and tear down our own interests, making the business of building up the most logical one, even from a purely selfish standpoint.

This community is most happily situated and people who call this home need only to look about them and count the advantages that are to be found here. With such a setting, there is no reason why the community should not be prosperous. And it will be prosperous and contentment will abound just in proportion as we individuals make it such by pulling together; by standing for home institutions; by supporting those enterprises that enlarge community life by enlarging wholesome activities. This is loyalty to home—loyalty to our merchants, to our schools, our churches, our industries, and our farms. These are the things that make life in every community worth while. Loyal people will support them.

LOG CABIN INSECTS

Insect injury to unbarked logs that are used in log cabins, summer houses and rustic woodwork can be prevented by cutting the trees at certain seasons of the year, says the U. S. Department of Agriculture. Most kinds of trees should be cut in late fall and piled up once, either on the ground or under cover, so that the inner bark is thoroughly dried before the insects appear in the spring. Wood with the bark still on is subject to attack by many kinds of beetles, which may reduce unseasoned wood almost to dust within a few months. Treatment of logs by chemicals or heat, after they have become infested, depends mainly on the habits of the insect involved.

Thousand Island dressing is a mayonnaise dressing with finely chopped materials added—as many as you like, chosen from the following, according to what you have on hand: pickles, olives, radishes, hard-cooked eggs, hard cheese, celery, green peppers, pimientos, capers, onion. It is excellent on plain lettuce and other salads.

MARCH TEMPERATURE

Only one sub-zero morning was recorded for the month of March against two last year and four in 1928. The mild period commenced on the 6th and was smashed into bits on the 15th, when a high wind howled for three days, but soon subsided and the weather settled into a milder, but with moderate wind, period and low temperature. On the whole, March played a fair average, but a trifle colder than last year.	March 1930	1929	1928	1927	1926

RUTHLESS METHODS NEEDED
Oil waste is an economic and social, but not legal, crime.

Ruthless methods are needed to combat the irresponsible producers who are keeping petroleum production above demand. In one western state, when such producers refused to abide by a conservation law, the major oil operators cut crude prices to the point where all profit vanished.

As a result, the fly-by-night producers quickly came into the field.

The Federal government, due to lack of jurisdiction in many cases, is hampered in the matter of oil conservation. The problem is up to the state governments of the great oil producing sections.

Every day's delay in providing and enforcing a workable conservation plan means that more of our invaluable petroleum reserve is being wasted. It means that thousands of irresponsible producers, interested only in quick profits are prospering at the expense of industries and homes of the nation.

It is the duty of the nation to see that our greatest and most essential industries are being retarded in its development along sound economic lines.

STOPPING BANDITRY
An Eastern judge, in advocating a stringent Federal anti-pistol law, said that "a pistol is as easy to use in the possession of honest, law-abiding citizens, because of the element of surprise."

On another page of the same issue of the newspaper in which this statement appeared, was an article describing the shooting of two armed bandits by the son of a storekeeper they were attempting to rob. Evidently, in this case, the "surprise" was on the part of the bandits, who had expected unarmed, unprotected victims.

"In the old days," said Judge Franklyn Taylor of Brooklyn, "when people were permitted to possess pistols, it was customary to see a pistol hanging on a shop wall behind a counter. The mere presence of that arm was a warning to the crook. Today the crook knows the law has removed that menace to him. I believe that if it were once known in the underworld that shops were armed again, that shopkeepers stood an equal chance with the thief and that adequate police details were there to pursue fleeing bandits, such a method would go further to stop banditry than any other."

Small arms legislation of one kind or another restricts the possession of weapons in many of our states. Crime is increasing. Murders, assaults and robberies are commonplace. And yet the reformers keep up their chant that further disarming of law-abiding citizens would stop crime!

A well armed citizenry would be a menace to the underworld.
